FOREWORD

THIS exhibition of sculpture, sponsored by the National Sculpture Society, is planned to be representative of the best recent available work of our American sculptors, although of course large scale monumental work could not be shown in an indoor setting.

Original works by living American sculptors were eligible, whether the exhibitors were members of this Society or not. It was the aim of the Jury of Selection to include examples from the different schools or styles of sculpture now being followed in our country.

From the founding of the National Sculpture Society in 1893, its object has been to foster the development and appreciation of American sculpture. Its exhibitions have been among its most important activities. In addition to many small but carefully made showings, it has held a number of very comprehensive exhibitions which have attracted extraordinary public interest. These have been seen not only in New York but in other large cities, including Baltimore, Buffalo, Washington and San Francisco.

Only through the cordial support and cooperation of its lay members and other friends has the Society been able to produce these major exhibitions. For this support our Society is grateful indeed. Encouragement of this kind is among our most deeply cherished experiences.

And now, the very generous hospitality of the Whitney Museum of American Art in inviting the Society to hold a Sculpture Festival in its beautiful galleries has made the present exhibition possible. To the Museum and its founder, the National Sculpture Society offers its sincere gratitude, with special appreciation of the continued devotion of Mrs. Whitney to living American art. We are much indebted also to Mrs. Force, Director of the Museum, for her sympathetic interest and support in this undertaking.
